4. RATIONALE FOR THE INCLUSION OF CONTENT AND TEACHING APPROACH

Ideas about teacher leadership have been under development in the research literature for at least the last twenty years. The main motivation for this has been the influence of models of distributed leadership, especially arising out of reforms to do with school-based management. Ironically, these reforms initially did much to emphasize the concentration of leadership in school principals. However, this was increasingly recognized as unrealistic and soon gave way to practices for distributing the demands of leadership. With the further demand that school reform deliver strong growth in student learning outcomes, the focus has now shifted back to teachers and the kinds of leadership roles they
